A Key La Meute Militant Finds a Neo-Nazi Organization... Then Changes His Mind a Few Hours Later

From Montreal Antifasciste

“Welcome to the official Blood & Honour page—the Québec division of the nationalist identitairian secular movement for a National Socialist autocracy.”

We were shocked to read this introduction to a new Facebook page that appeared on Saturday, November 3 in the early afternoon, announcing the formation of a “Québec Division” of the openly neo-Nazi “Blood & Honour”:

Blood & Honour - Division Québec

Bienvenue sur la page officielle Blood & Honour – Division Québec organisation nationaliste identitaire laïque à mouvance nationalsocialiste prônant l'autocratie

Le siège social de l'organisation est situé en Grande-Bretagne.

Notre organisation est divisée selon les 17 régions administratives du Québec afin de faciliter la gestion opérationnelle des activités.

Vous êtes invité à rejoindre le groupe fermé de l'organisation afin d'y devenir membre.

Par ailleurs, nous vous conseillons fortement d'aller prendre connaissance de notre mission sous l'onglet - À propos.

Aussi vous pourrez en apprendre davantage sur nos principes fondamentaux sous l'onglet – Information générale. Cela vous guidera dans l'idée de devenir ou pas membre.

Plus de détails à venir.

What is Blood & Honour?

Blood & Honour, an international neo-Nazi organization founded in the UK in 1987, takes its name from the Hitler Youth slogan Blut und Ehre, and from a song of that title by the white power band Skrewdriver. Initially rooted in the Rock Against Communism scene, Blood & Honour sections have sprung across the planet over the years. Blood and Honour remains a largely bonehead organization fully committed to neo-Nazi principles and regularly involved in violent actions.

Sometime around 2010, local sections were formed in western Canada. Their members were involved in numerous acts of aggression against people of colour and antifascists, including a particularly horrifying incident where a Filipino man sleeping on a couch outdoors in Vancouver was set on fire. Criminal proceedings and a split within the organization, followed by an antifascist hacking of the Blood & Honour website in 2012, made it possible to publish the names and addresses of members. These setbacks resulted in the group became increasingly low-key and effectively inactive for a number of years. Local sections do, however, continue to exist in British Columbia and Alberta.

The surprising formation and brief existence of a “Québec Division” of Blood & Honour is the first effort we are aware of to establish an official presence in Québec, where the Rock Against Communism scene is dominated by the Légitime Violence boneheads, the leading light of Raf Stomper/Raphaël Lévesque’s Atalante.

Who could be behind this “québec division” of Blood & Honour?

The item published on the new Facebook page was a sort of manifesto of the organization’s values. It was signed by one Michael Roch and linked to the website of the organization in the United Kingdom. The Blood& Honour Worldwide mentions a Canadian section, but says nothing about a Québec “Division.”

The mysterious “Québec Division” Facebook page redirected us to blog that was “under construction,” administered by a certain Michael Roch’s gmail account:

Blood & Honour - Division Québec

Blood and Honour Québec est une organisation nationaliste identitaire laïque œuvrant dans le domaine politique opérant indépendamment de tout parti politique. Nous désirons sensibiliser l'opinion publique aux problèmes qui concernent notre grande nation et ses habitants. Nous avons également pour objectif de réunir les personnes ayant un intérêt légitime d'assurer la préservation culturelle de notre patrimoine européen ainsi qu'un avenir prospère pour notre nation sous une bannière commune.

A quick search led us to the only Facebook account of a Michael Roch in the “nationalist” sphere, a certain Sgn Michael (Roch). The handful of public photos that this individual posted led us to believe that he was in the military.

Principes fondateurs de notre organisation

Blood & Honour- Division Québec qui sera guidé dans sa constitution, ses actions et sa politique par les principes suivants:

- Nous croyons en l'autodétermination par la création de l'égalité des chances[i];
- Nous croyons en la primauté du droit [ii], pierre angulaire de notre système de justice;
- Nous croyons en l'importance de promouvoir notre patrimoine culturel ainsi que l'histoire de nos ancêtres en tant que partie de notre identité;
- Nous croyons aux principes de responsabilité personnelle, de commerce équitable et d'autodétermination;
- Nous pensons que les États postcoloniaux devraient être préservés en tant que confédérations multinationales, plutôt que transformés en États-nations homogènes;
- Nous pensons que les efforts des gouvernements pour lutter contre les inégalités sociales devraient être axés sur des facteurs économiques plutôt que sur le statut de race / religion / minorité visible. Abolition des programmes d'accès à l'égalité;
- Nous pensons que la rentabilité n'est pas synonyme de valeur;
- Nous pensons que le citoyen est l'investissement le plus précieux de tout État;
- Nous croyons en une éducation, des soins de santé et un régime d'assurance-médicaments de meilleur qualité compte tenu du haut financement assuré par l'État;

Who is Agloolik Wolf?

Agloolik Wolf is an active member of La Meute, photographed here sporting his La Meute sweatshirt in happier days.

Until recently Agloolik was part of La Garde, La Meute's "elite" security unit. He is pictured below between Mario Roy (Storm Alliance and La Meute) and Steeve L'Artiss Charland (La Meute Council).

Agoolik Wolf is a very disturbing individual, who is nothing like the standard profile of a Nazi. He claims to be part of the Innu nation and has argued for an alliance of the Québécois de souche and First Nations since his earliest days in La Meute. Up to this point, we thought of him as part of the “moderate” tendency within la Meute.

Agloolik Wolf

Vous savez pour moi la Meute est une belle grande famille. Et comme dans chaque famille tout n'est pas toujours rose. Il y a vraiment des gens formidables et de cœur. Il est faux de croire que nous portons un message de haine. Ceux qui tente de le faire chez nous, soi ils se font renvoyer ou encore ils quittent de par eux même parce que ce n'est pas ce qu'ils croyaient au préalable être de La Meute

Je ne suis pas un Nazi ou néo ou whatever the shit. Ces gens qui défendent l'indéfendable dans cette idéologie de merde sont pour moi des salopards .. pour rester poli 😊

Agloolik (an Inuit word) is the standard bearer for this alliance between the Québécois and First Nations in opposition to so-called illegal immigration:

Agloolik Wolf

Je ne suis aucunement contre l'immigration. Cependant je veux que les premières nations puisse avoir leurs mots à dire sur ces questions nationales puisqu'elles sont prise à leur insu, sans le consentement des PNs, moi c'est ça qui me dérange. Vous réalisez que l'immigration qui se fait et bien c'est d'ajouter des gens sur les terres ancestrales volés

28 juil · Envoyé depuis Messenger

This seems to be part of a public relations operation masterminded by Sylvain “Maikan” (which means “wolf” in Innu) Brouillette following his assumption of the leadership of La Meute.

This attempted alliance clearly went nowhere, given the disappointment Agloolik expressed the day after a number of First Nations members demonstrated . . . against La Meute alongside antifascists.

The recent setback for the identitarian group at the border of Kanesatake, immortalized in a video shared more than eight hundred times, couldn't have been good for morale.

Nonetheless, Agloolik, who regularly posts live video on Facebook, has a significant following and a certain influence within La Meute. Up to this point, he has provided La Meute with a youthful “antiracist” façade, however, it only takes a bit of research to dispose of the gentleman’s somewhat innocent image.

Agloolik Wolf is really just a run-of-the-mill La Meute member—an Islamophobe and a racist.

En 2009, les musulmans représentaient 1,5% de la population québécoise. Aujourd'hui ils forment 3% de la population et demain, ils dépasseront en nombre la minorité anglophone du Québec.

Loin d'être un « fantasme d'extrême droite », l'islamisation du Québec est une réalité démographique incontestable.

Like most La Meute members, his Islamophobia is seamlessly melded with the most absurd of conspiracy theories. Here, in a discussion about “survivalism” with Monsieur Cochon Bacon, there in an exchange with Mélanie Gagné, whose racist Facebook posts were recently flagged by Xavier Camus. He clearly states that he created his Facebook page specifically to talk freely about the “dangers posed by Islam.”

He is also openly anti-feminist and transphobic, as well as sharing the crude anticommunism common among identitarian nationalists.

A quick glance at his “likes” gives us an idea of who he is. From the racist Fédération des Québécois de souche to the fascist Atalante, by way of the anti-Semitic and transphobic DMS, and a variety of other suspect interests, we arrive at sadly banal picture of a far-right, racist reactionary in Québec in 2018.

Contrary to the image he wants to project, he is unquestionably a far-right racist. Agloolik Wolf protested in the extreme when, on the evening before the La Meute's July 1, 2018 demonstration in Montréal, a representative of the City's public security service described La Meute as more or less Nazi.

«Je suis préoccupée par la manifestation d'extrême droite du 1er juillet. Je ne pense pas que de mettre des néonazis dos à dos avec des antifascistes, ce soit une bonne stratégie de contrôle de foule», a-t-elle dit.

By founding a Québec Division of Blood & Honour, Agloolik Wolf, alias Sgn Michael (Roch), a member La Meute's La Garde security unit, proves that he is not that all that allergic to the neo-Nazi label.

How did we connect these two accounts to a single individual?

Quite a bit of evidence and a number of crossovers allowed us to quickly connect the two accounts to a single person and to firmly establish that this person, La Meute member Agloolik Wolf, was behind the Québec "Division" of the Nazi terrorist organization Blood & Honour.

A number of clues led us to this conclusion:

A traditionalist Innu comrade from Pessamit confirmed that the first name of the person hiding behind the pseudonym Agloolik Wolf is "Michael," that he had been in the military, and that he had been adopted by a Québécois family.

The word "autocracy" used on the Blood & Honour—Division Québec page doesn't appear anywhere on the official Blood & Honour website. However, it appears to be a preferred buzzword for Agloolik Wolf, who released a Facebook live video on the theme in July.

We knew that both accounts belonged to someone in the military, given the photos published and Akloolik's statements.

J'suis membre de La Meute

J'appuie tout ceux et celles qui se donnent la peine de se lever.

Je suis actif et impliqué!

Parce que nos droits fondamentaux sont de plus en plus bafoués par l'élite. Pour moi, combattre cette terrible situation me tiens à cœur.

Parce que notre sécurité est menacée. Toronto a été la cible d'un horrible attentat terroriste. Cela ne présage donc rien de bon pour l'avenir. Or, je ne peux m'empêcher de craindre une escalade de la violence sur notre territoire.

Le multiculturalisme aveugle et l'ouverture imprudente de nos frontières laissent entrer des membres de l'état islamique. Il y aura d'autres attentats. Le prochain pourrait même avoir lieu chez moi à Montréal.

Voilà pourquoi nous avons besoin de vous plus que jamais! On a besoin de la force du nombre pour empêcher nos gouvernements de détruire davantage notre pays. Levez-vous Svp! Nous sommes déjà en retard!

Among the tip-offs, Agloolik made the mistake of sharing the same photo on his two accounts:

This made it easy for to quickly ascertain that Agloolik Wolf and Michael Roch/Sgn Michael were the same person. But it doesn't end there: these two Facebook accounts were also connected to a third that was closed some months ago: Éric Mickael Séguin.

Everything points to Séguin being Agloolik's actual family name; that's the name that appears on his uniform in this photo, where he is flanked by the cop Picard (sporting the Thin Blue Line badge used by the racist Blue Lives Matter countermovement).

It seems that he is no longer in the military. In this photo, taken in June, he appears to be wearing either a nurse or orderly's uniform:

It is difficult to determine whether his real first name is Éric or Michael, but we still have enough evidence to connect the three accounts and present a portrait of this individual: a former member of the military, perhaps an officer, an active La Meute member, a member of the La Meute security team at demonstrations and private meetings, a member of La Garde until he resigned three weeks ago (at the time, he released a mystical-political explaining that his struggle “lies elsewhere”), influential within La Meute, and, as an Innu, a standard bearer for Brouillette’s “politics of inclusion.”

While many of his close associates “liked” the new Blood & Honour page, there were others who questioned a La Meute member playing such a role in an openly Nazi organization.

At approximately 5:00 p.m., less than four hours after posting the Blood & Honour page, he closed his two Facebook pages (Agloolik Wolf and Sgn Michael), the Blood & Honour—Division Québec Facebook page, and the associated blog. Unfortunately for him, we were able to grab a certain number of screenshots.

It’s possible that the La Meute Council thought that it was a less than stellar idea for one of its officers, and therefore a key member, to be promoting an openly Nazi organization that defends genocide of alleged inferior “races” for the advance of the “white race.”

What was the impact of this new page?

Among the various “likes,” we find an unsurprising collection of neo-Nazis, including Phil SoWhat (Philippe Gendron, of the Soldiers of Odin, a fascist groupusculé currently in total disarray), as well as, and perhaps more disturbingly, people of a certain age with profiles that appear banal and far removed from Nazism, including members of groups like La Meute (Rhoda Bourque, Christine Boily) and Storm Alliance (Patricia Celtic Gagnon) and simple “patriots.”

This is precisely the problem with a group like La Meute, of which Agloolik Wolf, alias Michael Roch, alias Éric Mickael Séguin, is a member: the capacity to act as an incubator and recruiting site for far more radical groups like Blood & Honour.

We already noted and denounced this phenomenon a year ago, on November 25, 2017, when Atalante and the Soldiers of Odin unfurled a nationalist banner on the ramparts in Québec City, to an enthusiastic reception from those within in the ranks of La Meute and the Storm Alliance demonstrating at the National Assembly that day.

The problem with these “identitarian nationalist populists” is that they facilitate contact between hundreds of members of the “soft” far right and far more radical organizations.

We can draw a number of conclusions:

- A member of the Canadian army quietly climbed up the ranks of La Meute, becoming part of LaGarde, a high-level post in the organization's security and discipline apparatus;
- this person actively and publicly participated in La Meute's security service, effectively a private militia, and he did so openly with his face uncovered for many months while still in the military, with absolutely no reaction from the Canadian Armed Forces, which boasts about its zero-tolerance policy;
- this same La Meute officer attempted to found a Québec Division of the neo-Nazi organization Blood & Honour, receiving more than one hundred "likes" in the few hours it existed, many of them from La Meute members.

What we've uncovered raises more questions than it provides answers, and some of these questions are unsettling. Using different pseudonyms, this person presented himself as a "non-racist" La Meute member, only to go on to create a neo-Nazi website, all the while being a member of the Canadian Armed Forces and presenting himself as Indigenous. What the hell? Are we simply dealing with a confused person? Is this an intelligence operation gone wrong? These are questions to keep in mind while watching to see where this whole strange story of Agloolik/Roch/Séguin goes.

Our tawdry little tale is in the end of little immediate political consequence. There doesn't seem like there will be a Blood&Honour—Division Québec. Nonetheless, it does allow us to question the true nature of La Meute. After all, the organization has been trying to clean up its image and regain a foothold for several months now. What this story does provide is the ultimate evidence of the need to continue to fight against La Meute, which has been a racist and Islamophobic organization from the get-go, one founded by soldiers and organized like a paramilitary militia.

EPILOGUE

As we publish this text, ten days after the events in question, the Facebook accounts of Agloolik Wolf and Michael Sgn (without the "Roch") have reappeared. While Agloolik Wolf appears to have resumed his normal activities (regular posts about things to do with La Meute and the far right), Michael Sgn provides the key that allows us to determine that this central La Meute member and the founder of Blood&Honour—Division Québec are the same person: with his new profile photo, Michael "Roch" Séguin leaves us with no doubt that he and Agloolik Wolf are one and the same.
